

EGI is currently looking for 2/3 people to join our board of trustees.

EGI is a registered educational charity based in central Edinburgh, Scotland. We specialise in high-quality, creative personal and professional development in relational, embodied gestalt psychotherapy training and supervision.

EGI offers:

- introductory courses
- free taster evenings
- Diploma-level training in gestalt psychotherapy
- supervision
- advanced training and workshops
- group therapy and personal development groups
- organisational consultancy
- access to a network of practitioners
- room hire

The EGI staff team share a deep, lived commitment to relational embodied psychotherapy. We are interested in the ways in which our social, political, economic, cultural and ecological contexts influence human growth and change. We have a strong commitment to learning as a lifelong process, and to providing a safe and stimulating professional environment.

We are currently in a process of transition amongst our executive team and our board. We are looking to recruit 3/4 trustees to join our board who may have an interest in: OD, the arts, small business growth, human growth and development and well being, finance, marketing, adult learning and education amongst other things.

I have attached a broad role description of the EGI board and also a more detailed outline of the current organisational structure of EGI.

Please forward this information to anyone who you think may be interested in EGI's work and ask them to get in touch Andrew Pritchard (chair of the EGI board) edinburghpdgroup@gmail.com for a further conversation.
