Have you ever wanted to train to be a counselling supervisor ?
Do you have an interest in developing your existing skills ?
Are you looking for CPD accredited course ?

Course Overview

The course is aimed at counsellors with a Diploma in Counselling or counselling skills users with a COSCA Counselling Skills certificate or equivalent as their training. It is designed to equip the less experienced practitioner with a better understanding and use of supervision, as well as to provide a significant first step for the longer trained and more experienced practitioner in their role as supervisors.

About GCA

Glasgow Council on Alcohol has delivered COSCA courses since 1999 and our COSCA Trainers bring a wealth of experience. GCA deliver COSCA from a safe and comfortable learning setting within Glasgow City Centre which is easily accessed by public transport.

Study Outline

The Course is divided up into two separate sections:

Part One: Certificate in Counselling Supervision Skills

This part of the course gives practitioners an in-depth understanding of supervision and how to use it effectively. The Certificate can be completed in its own right or used as the first step in gaining the Counselling Supervision Certificate.

Part Two: Certificate in Counselling Supervision

This part of the course, which is in addition to the above, involves supervisory work. You must be in a position to supervise at least 2 counsellors/counselling skills users and submit a 2000-2500 word case study based on your work as a supervisor.

Entry Requirements

Part One: Certificate in Counselling Supervision Skills requires participants to have the COSCA Counselling Skills Certificate. (or equivalent)

Part Two: Certificate in Counselling Supervision requires participants to have a Counselling Diploma (or equivalent) and substantial (at least 2 years') experience as a counselling practitioner with a minimum of 150 hours supervised client work and be in a position to practice in a supervisory role in their own organisation or have other arrangements.

Validation

The course has full COSCA validation GCA is a COSCA recognised organisation. This course is delivered by qualified trainers with extensive counselling supervisory experience.
